into allegations that a Liberal MP leaked confidential tax information has serious implications for press freedom and the historic rights of parliament. The issue arose when the Montreal Gazette alleged that John Reid, parliamentary secretary to Mitchell Sharp, revealed information on a forthcoming amendment to a tax bill.

In denying the charge, Reid asked the newspaper to publish an apology. If no apology was forthcoming the MP said he would assume malicious intent. If that was the case, in his view, the House of Commons could not permit false, unfair, unbalanced or defamatory accounts of its proceedings to be published.

The Gazette offered only a partial apology, sticking to its guns on part of the story. The House of Commons speaker then ruled an apparent breach of privilege had taken place and members voted unanimously to turn the matter over to the committee on privilege

> The question arises that if a newspaper can be hauled before the Commons for possible punishment, so can any journalist who writes something that offends the Commons. What might offend any legislative body could be political rather than legal in form. To be brought before the bar of the House does not have the niceties of a judge or jury trial. An angry legislature is both the complainant and judge. The only appeal is to

Centuries past, when monarchs looked on their legislatures with extreme suspicion, it was an offence to publish reports of what was said in parliamentary debates. In fact it still is, although any attempt to remove the press gallery from a Canadian legislature would be considered an attack on democracy itself. Yet even today when the Commons decides its privilege has been breached it can fine or

Since the House voted unanimously to refer the current matter to the privilege committee, it had no choice but to consider the issue. But the 21 parliamentarians who are listening to the case should tread very lightly on exercising their powerful authority in this issue. The only person who might have been maligned by the story is Reid. He has indicated he will put the matter before the courts. That is where it should be judged. It was parliament that provided every citizen with recourse to libel action if they are publicly maligned. Press councils also exist in Ontario and Quebec which will investigate any complaints and publish their findings. There are enough avenues towards redress without a parliamentary committee dabbling in a question of privilege that is anachronistic, redundant and potentially dangerous to freedom of

Blood on the Tracks. Diamonds and Rust

I first heard the ethereal soprano of Joan Baez 16 years ago. It was at a raucous party of students, beatniks (that dates me) interior decorators and general poseurs. All the flotsam and jetsam of the timid 1950s babbling together in a basement room accented with Mexican tin masks sporting Kresge marbles for eyes.

Through the haze came this voice singing the traditional North Carolina lament, Wildwood Flower.

I rushed over to the hi-fi (that too) to find out who it was. Of course it was this madonna of Irish and Mexican parentage whom I have worshipped ever since. Baez was as much a symbol of the 1960s as Bob Dylan.

Nostalgic or hopeful, we listened to the traditional ballads of Baez. When we were angry about the system we switched to Dylan's sardonic allegories. The first generation to conjure a political philosophy at the flick of a buttor As the years passed Baez became angrier. She abandoned the wild mountain thyme for the confrontations of the city. Songs like Birmingham Sunday told of the senseless bombing of an Alabama church where three young black girls

Dylan, meanwhile, told us he was on the pavement thinking about the government. In a song called Desolation Row he warned of the riot squad being restless and the nurse - "some local loser" who kept the cards which read have mercy on your soul. Vietnam was in full swing; Chicago's Democratic convention was just around the corner; Kent State was further up the block.

Yes, yes, I know there were plenty of Canadian concerns. But nearly five years after the event you don't hear Stompin' Tom Connors, Joni Mitchell or even Robert Charlebois singing about the War Measures Act. Perhaps the CRTC can legislate that too.

The truisms of the popular song do not seem to penetrate the bush garden

Anyway in those early heady days Dylan and Bacz became fast friends in New York's Greenwich village. As their ndividual fame twined into superpower blooms, whatever they shared wilted

Baez started a peace school, in California, naturally, and married a noted war resister. Dylan also acquired a spouse, an anonymous girl of the north country, and disappeared into the vast gloomy of America. After a brilliant tour de force in an album entitled Blonde on Blonde he was injured in a motorcycle accident and went into hiding in New

1970s both of these people have produced new albums within months of each other. Dylan is edging towards his harder line of old, although the songs are mainly about failed love. iness of the elderly. The illusions are gone. Both of their marriages have failed. Some of the old causes are dead or co-opted by time. No fires are burning in the new reflection

Even the album titles are evocative of the past. Baez has titled hers Diamonds and Rust after a song which appears to harken back to her days with Dylan. Blood on the Tracks from Dylan suggests that the train of experience has gone roaring down the right of way leaving the evidence of an old confrontation

As popular music increasingly wallows in freaky perversion it is almost as if these titans are keening to each other over the hubbub of the yahoos.

Baez ends her offering with a medley of Danny Boy and Stephen Foster's I Dream of Jeannie. Beautiful melodies but not the stuff of political insight

Is the bemused serenity of middle age ousing the blazing banners?

I don't know. But on a languid summer weekend both these albums make for good listening. If you don't know, they'll tell you where we've been and perhaps give hint of where we're going after being hit

An Extra Feather

I strongly second your editorial sup-porting our country's bilingual programs. We should remember that although Quebec is the only province where French is the language of the majority, there were in 1961 at least 1.3 million French - Canadians in the other provinces, a figure which will have jumped since then.

About a third of New Brunswickers are francophone — "les Acadiens." On-tario has à 10 per cent French population. Manitoba has a vigorous minority who speak the language of Anne Hebert and Alain Grandbois, and even the minprities of Saskatchewan and Alberta are large enough to produce local newspapers in that idion. B.C. has a fastgrowing group, with over 2,000 in Vic toria alone, and a weekly paper called-Le Soleil published in Vancouver.

The French presence is also one of the few really tangible ways in which we can distinguish ourselves and our culture from that of the American republic to our south. Have your readers noticed that recently the best internationally prize-winning cinema films from Canada are very often French-Canadian? Mon Oncle Antoine and Les Ordres, for exam-

Apart from Canada, France, Belgium and Switzerland and half of Africa are francophone, as are some Caribbean and South Pacific areas. Most of Indochina's elite speak French and often where Enghish will not serve in Latin America, the Arab world or eastern Europe, your French will. So even for those who care little about Canadian unity or cultural life, this language is still an extra feather worth having in your cap!-Ron Holland, 1164 Greenwood Avenue.

French Dangers?

Since its inauguration, the Trudeau government, guided originally by the Pearson regime, has made every effort to put the federal civil service, the armed services, etc., under French control. With the excuse that the country lacked proper communications between the English and the French, a totally exaggerated claim, French has been forced

The practice seems to have started in wartime, and the military mind came up with a couple of good ones - snafu and radar but in peacetime the acronymbats went wild. Cold warrior John Foster Dulles and his frenetic treaty-making of the 1950s might be all forgotten but for the skeletal initial remains of the alliances he forged - SEATO and CENTO and ANZUS.

Acronyms seem to have multiplied in geometric progression as a factor of the arithmetical expansion of government bureaucracies. The pre-war scholar of Canadian government knew there was a House of Commons and Senate, a supreme court, and the civil service and that was it. Now any knowledgeable political scientist has to keep straight the CBC. CDC, CTC, CRTC, CMHC, CLRB, CLC, UIC, DoT and DNRT. They've even acronymized SIN.

Balancing Scales

Re Jack Scott's column of Aug. 11 on some American tourists, I would like to balance the record by telling you about

Back in the 1960s, when I was living near the parliament buildings, I went out one morning to walk my cocker spaniel. A few minutes later, a man who looked rather like Ronald Colman came out of the motel opposite with a dog which might have been the twin of mine. Naturally, the two animals tried to reach each other, so he came across the street to let them get acquainted. He told me he was visiting Victoria for a few days and that he was from Palo Alto. I told him I had a sister in San Jose. I also mentioned that I wanted to visit her very much but that having a dog made it impossible as I could not afford the cost of boarding kerinels there. Without a word he took out his wallet and handed me his business card. Then he said: "My wife and I would be very glad to look after your dog for the three weeks you visit your sister. Just give us a phone call when you get to Palo Alto." A few minutes later he walked out of my life but I shall remember his kindness to my dying day. My sister visited me in the end so I never did take advantage of his offer. All I know about him is that he is an obviously very well to do professional man, with a heart as big as his wallet

As to my second great American (and there have been many such wonderful ones in my life) he also appeared on the scene in the 1960s. I was working as a magazine salesperson, selling a magazine over a counter in an office. This man, also a tourist from California, took out a subscription from me. When I learned that he was a lawyer. I thought to myself: "If I ever need a lawyer, that is the man I would like to represent me, as I feel I could trust him with any-

Although our encounter didn't last more than five minutes, I kept a record of his name and address just in case I ever needed a lawyer. A short time later my mother died in California and I desters relating to her estate. I thought of this man and although I knew I could never afford to retain him as he was a big corporation lawyer, I thought he might be able to suggest someone less expensive.. That wonderful man made several long distance phone calls to the lawyer in charge of the estate, got a copy of the will and sent it to me, wrote me several letters concerning the entire proceedings, and kept an eye on everything until it was settled. For all this he refused to take a penny. The pen and pencil set I sent him for Christmas certainly did not equal in value the money and hours of work he spent on my behalf. Yet he even wrote me a most gracious thank-you note for them. So he also will live in my memory as one of my many great Americans! - Phyllis H. Kaye, 53 Cambridge Street.

Budget Woes

Some facts about B.C.'s financial priorities may be of interest. During the spring session of the legislature, the official opposition strongly criticized Premier Barrett's $3.2 billion budget because it represented a decline in spending for services to people as a percentage of total spending.

In that budget, there are many examples of mistaken spending priorities $40 million for new government office . space but only $20 million for revenue sharing with municipalities to help ease home-owners' property tax burdens. just to run his office, but only $5 million for the entire department of economic is being drained empty by massive over runs by government departments and crown corporations - ICBC, $36 millio BCR, $32 million: Hydro transit, $17 million; B.C. Ferries, $25 million.

There is evidence of a real decline in the standard of service the government is providing for people. This decline is becoming more severe as economic ditions worsen and the treasury becomes more hard pressed.

The employees of many provincial health and penal institutions are overworked because the government has failed to provide funds for more staff to meet the demands for service. Highways in parts of the province are in their worst condition in more than a decade because the government has not provided sufficient funds to properly maintain

Community colleges are facing a financial crisis because the government cannot find money to keep pace with the growth in enrolment, in some cases as nuch as 50 per cent. Many students hired on the government's summer employment program who were initially advised they would have work for July and August have been laid off at the end of

Money which should have been re served for the economic rainy day British Columbia is now suffering through has been spent much - much of it on

The government is faced with two op tions, neither of which is acceptable to me. With the provincial treasury deplet-ed, Premier Barrett must either cut back further on services or face a deficit budget.

Social Credit is committed to provide sound management of our province's resources so that services can be fully maintained in both good and bad economic times. - W. R. Bennett, Leader of the Opposition, Victoria.

A REBEL'S LEGACY

By ANTHONY LEWIS

LONDON—The late Richard Crossman was a British poli-tician, a generally left-wing member of the Labor party, who differed from almost everyone else in this country's

He did not care what the makers of established opinion thought about him. He did not play the game of approval. He was prepared to be thought a nuisance, even a cad.

Crossman is news in Britain these days because, while he was in the Lator cabinet from 1964 to 1970, he kept a diary. He intended to publish it, as he made elear to everyone, and after his death in 1974 his literary executors went ahead with plans for publication. That has led to a drama of law and polytics and personality.

For the last two weeks, the Lord Chief Justice of England, Lord Widgery, has been hearing a suit to enjoin publication of the Crossman Diaries.

The case was brought by the Attorney General in the present Labor government, and it asks to have the book on any excerpts kept from the public indefinitely.

What, then, is all the fuss about? The Diaries disclose the shocking fact that members of the England.

shocking fact that members of the British cabinet sometimes disagree with one another. They also get conflicting advice from their civil servants.

Merely to recite such awful things makes one's lower lip tremble. Why until Richard Crossman wrote them down, everyone in this country assumed that Labor party and cabinet members loved each other and never disagreed about any-

Can grown men and women really expect anyone to believe such stuff? The actuality is that disagreement and backbiting are as frequent in this government as in any other, possibly a little more so.

And anyone who moves in London political circles hears people say things about each other's official views and private lives that would make the sourest Washington gossib's haircure.

This tends to be a closed society still. Those in power mostly prefer to cover over unpleasant realities with n

That is what offends the establishment. Its view is that what people do know will hurt them.

From a legal viewpoint, the odd thing is that the suft against the Crossman Diaries is not based on any statute. Britain has an Official Secrets Act, much criticized as too drastic, but it does not happen to authorize injunctions before publication.

Rather than whit and use it to prosecute after publication, which might be politically embarrassing, the Attorney General has a ked for an injunction under what he calls the "inherent power" of the courts.

The short answer from American judges would probably be a refusal to extend the law into areas where the legisla-ture has declined to go. It made a great difference in the Pentagon Papers case, probably a decisive one, that Congress had not in clear terms provided for the injunction sought by the Nixon Administration against the New York,

Goldstream Ramble In Skipper's Honor

If you missed Freeman King and his weekly Nature-Ramble lately, you were not alone; a lot of other people did too. There's a good reason for Skipper's absence; he's been laid up. A fighter all his life, Skipper is engaged in his greatest test-right now and everyone who ever knew him is

Not the least of Skipper's many contributions to Victoria life over the years has been the joy he brought his readers many of them shut-ins, through his weekly Nature Rambles Well, Skipper is a shut-in himself now and the idea occurred to me that the old boy might just enjoy — in spirit at least — a nature ramble with me along one of his favorite trails, the Prospectors' Trail in Goldstream Park.

Don't worry Skipper; it'll be a short walk, just up from the bridge to the old mine shaft and back. My boy Pat's coming along too. He'll be a useful extra pair of eyes and ears.

Let's begin by taking a look around the bridge. There's a gang of chickadees in that alder, chattering cheerfully and busily performing their particular kind of insect control program. Pat figures they're French chickadees they're so excit-

And what's that down by the water's edge? Take a look Pat and see if you can make it out.

"It's a they." says Pat. Sure enough there are four of them, black, shiny, shapeless objects wrapped around a carret. They're slugs, the black variety so common along the Goldstream and they seem to be enjoying what must be something new in their diet. Carrots are hard to come by along the lower Goldstream.

But Pat is up and away again and down the road to the trail sign. I tag along behind and watch him spring up the 169 steps to the upper trail, wondering if I'll make it to the top.

But I do and while Pat is anxious to keep going I plead a moment's rest — disguised, of course, as a chance to sit quietly and listen to the sounds of nature.

The ruse works and we listen; first to traffic poises drift ing up from the highway far below, then to the croak of a aven overhead, then to siskins and nuthatches fussing about among the high foliage of the tall trees.

A troup of crossbills hurtles down the canyon while we try to locate and identify a rather faint clicking sound with a ventriloquil quality.

Pat's eyes, again, help to solve this one. He spots something drifting down from the branches above — a scale from a Douglas fir cone. I look up and there's our mystery clicker — a squirrel struggling with a tight, green cone and tearing off scales with great enthusiasm

Four or five more squirrels come our way, a jot for a walk in Goldstream. They seem small, perhaps young of the year; part of a family now breaking up, each preparing for

Then it's a patch of salal with ripening wine-colored ber ries, a cluster of powder-blue Oregon grape berries, and a patch of Indian Pipe — still amazingly fresh for so late in the season, and a pinkish, jelly-like mass on a rotting log — a type of fungus — and many little heaps of cone scales —

Up near the mine shaft we discover a clump of twisted stalk which, unlike the salal and Oregon grape whose berries so far remain untouched, has lost its neat little pairs of pendulous red berries to some avian fruit fancier like a

Then the mine shaft itself comes in for a close examination by Paf and, while I contemplate the mighty natural forces that have shaped Goldstream, a pileated woodpecker begins work on a nearby log.

begins work on a hearpy log.

But it's back to civilization. Pat decides he's had enough of nature for one day so down we go, meeting most, of our earlier interests again on the way — including the four slugs and the diminishing remains of their carrot — and adding a dipper bobbing below the bridge near the parking lof.

As usual, Goldstream has come up with a quiet, yet. eventful, walk. But something's missing!, Could be you Skipper? Hurry back, the place isn't the same without you.

"I think the economic re-covery is ahead of schedule, both in terms of timing and in terms of magnitude," Pate increased backroom supplies in June.

The inventory situation was partly reflected in the latest jobless figures, that reflected a 630,000 increase in the work force, mostly in retail trades. But the unemployment report said factory workers still were not being rehired.

That fact also turned up in this week's inventory statistics, which showed manufacturers continuing to sell goods from stockrooms, but Pate said the factory inventory liquidation should end shortly. said.

Pate said key statistical measures of the U.S. economy are continuing to show "surprising" improvement.

The pack accepted Greg's pres-ence only because Nahani or-dered it. To increase rapport, "When she craved a salmon for dinner... and ordered it by bring ing fish bones to his camp...he fished and cooked for her."

Nahani, the silver skinned wolf, "the one who shines," became legendary and a price was put on her head. Bounty hunters like Eugene Charlie and Trapper Dan claimed hani and her band of 28 killers. Later an outbreak of rabies, wrongly attributed to Nahun's pack, increased the mania among hunters and trappers to bring down the famed wolf, and the price on har bear heard scarce at $1.500.

Greg returned to his winter ness of the Kitwanga between the Coast Mountains and the Rocky Mountains north of Hazelton till he found the phannorth toward the Yukon out of range of the relentless bounty hunters. Two summers and a winter passed and Greg, after a fantastic trek over 400 miles, finally found Nahani. So did her other trackers. But with the death of Trapper Dan, the American trouby hunters who two foot Nahani is still alive. In The Shadow Of A rainbow is more than an exciting adventure story or a diary of one man's incredible communication with a wild animal; it is a revealing and informative account of the social structure of a wolf pack that should cain this much maligned and count of the social structure of a wolf pack that should be a wolf p dermination. One thing for sure, it's a story that will whet the appetite of Walt Dis-

Of local interest is the fact that only one subspecies of wolf, the Vancouver Island wolf, is officially considered rare and endangered. Hunting and poisoning and the old bounty system are responsible for his decline. A few are be-lieved to still exist in the Kelsey Bay area and there may be other isolated families on the northern end of the island but that's all.

For the others, it's too late.

The Wolf Who Sings for All of Us

Anyone who has ever listened with awe to the music of wolves howling in the wilderness will enjoy this legend. On the South Nahanni River last summer

The ageless sky was waiting above crisp snow-dusted landscape. Waiting in silence. Breathless. Then it came, imperceptibly with no precise beginning. Eerie fluting music. Strange siren sounds rising briefly, then trailing in long tonal streams weaving into the night. Now a mingling of throaty, fluid refrains pulsing in mysterious chorale.

Yet there is a legend told by George Stone that for part of their history, wolves did not sing. In words as poetic as the sound of the animals themselves, the author presents wolves as silent, having contempt for such "unintelligible expression, such undignified exhibitionism," ever since Rufus the tyrant wolf, the destroyer, took song away and prowolf, the destroyer, took song away and pro-nounced it evil. But then comes wolf, the dis-ciple of Dirus, the Great Dire Wolf, the chosen one, to find the power of song rekin-dled and, reborn, begins his crusade to let other wolves know the joy of song. They will learn again "their heritage, the essence of their identity" and "re-establish their dignity and noisility." and nobility.

Thwarted by the hostility of the pack, Wolf must try another way, Upon the advice of Elder, outcast also but by age, one whose own dreams lead him to become Wolf's companion, if not his disciple, Wolf seeks a mate to procreate a pack of singing wolves that brings back music to the wilderness.

Wolf Song is more than just a poetically told, beautifully illustrated legend. It is more than a story of social mores as Wolf explores modern parable reminiscent of Jonathan Liyingstone Seagull. Wolf-sees visions, dreams dreams, encounters evil, faces frustrations and temptations, and sings for all of us.

C.A.S.E. HEAD BIDS FOR $10,825 GRANT

Victoria environmentalist Derrick Mallard has asked the provincial government for $10,825 that will enable him to complete a study of U.S. and European waste disposal systems as a basis for similar projects here.

He said he is acting as an individual with a background of experience and interest in preserving and improving the quality of urban and rural environments. He is currently president of Citizens Association to Save the Environment.

Copies of a prospectus outlining his plan to finish work on the study have been delivered to provincial ministers of housing, mu-nicipal affairs, agriculture, lands, forest and water resources, and mines and petroleum resources.

It contains examples of sewage and garbage treatment and recovery systems operating in three United Kingdom areas which sell salvaged materials and compost recovered from waste treatment.

The chief result is a cleaner environment and agricultural benefits from improved soil quality, Mallard points out. But side benefits include financial savings in the handling and disposal of wastes, and less wastefulness in

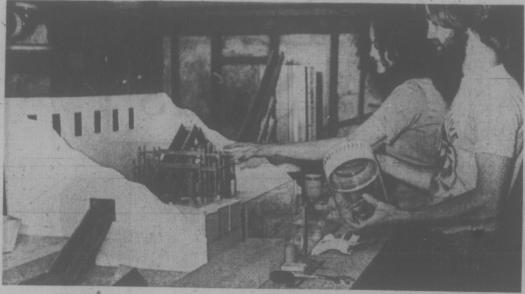

. He proposes a four-month project that would take him to four European countries for six weeks and to the U.S. for up to two lions on extending sewer pipes into the sea when they should be reversing the flow to make use of the effluent, Mallard believes.

"It is crazy to continue this illogical method of disposing of wastes, of which little, really, is waste..." I mean can't be reused." The province is making more money available for sewage treatment, he notes, and can therefore make retrieval systems more attractive to municipalities.

In his preliminary research Mallard found a whoily different attitude prevails in the UK toward waste treatment, where 40 per cent of sludge from sewage treatment processes is applied to agricultural needs.

Mallard wants to complete his project to make it comprehensive, pass along the information in documents and audio-visual aids to government departments, regional districts and municipalities for their consideration, and develop analogies in B.C.

Hope Escape Artist Finally in Court

VANCOUVER (CP) — Cecil Logan, 30, a drug addict who was released from the British Columbia penitentiary before standing trial on charges of escaping from the Hope RCMP jail twice in 30 hours last summer, finally came to court "Friday.

Logan was "freed" last fall and went on a spree of cashing phoney money orders totally about $3,450 and travelled around Canada, the U.S. and Mexico.

Earlier this year he was picked up by police and decided to plead guilty to forgery and escaping charges for which he was sentenced Friday by Provincial Court Judge Andrew Carmichael to five months for the escapes and three years on 15 counts of forgery.

Logan was arrested July 8, 1974, in Hope on several charges of dealing in forged documents and was lodged in the local RCMP jall with a prisoner who had allegedly taken a shot at an RCMP constable.

On July 16 he and his cellmate broke out of the jail and fled into the bushes only to be recaptured some time later.

They were returned to the jail and put into separate cells only to band together again and escape a second time just 30

KELOWNA (CP) - John Harker, headmaster at St. George's School for boys in Vancouver for 31 years, has died at 79. He came to Vancouver from England in 1929 and was headmaster of the school from 1931 until 1962 as St. George's became one of the major independent schools in the province. He acted as consultant to other independent schools after his retirement and was headmaster for a year, 1964, at Vernon WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) - Andy Chelsea, chief of the Alkalai Indian band, said Friday the band has outlined to the Cariboo Regional District plans presented to Resources Minister Bob Widiams for an Indian logging operation on crown land. He would release no further details until after Williams has had a chance to study the plan.

Jack Baker of the British Columbia Lions Society said Friday a provincial grant of $60,000 would enable the society to maintain its transportation system for handicapped people who cannot use public buses.

VANCOUVER (CP) — David White, 36, of Vancouver, dled in hospital Friday of injuries suffered in a traffic accident July 27. Police said he was injured when his car struck

VANCOUVER (CP) - James Sanderson of Vancouver, who was released from jail due to a clerical error Wednes-day, was arrested Thursday to serve a 30-day sentence. He was released after two charges were withdrawn. Unknown to jail staff, Sanderson had been convicted and sentenced on a third charge of breach of probation. VANCOUVER (CP) — The rental housing council of British Columbia has sent an open letter to Premier Dave Barrett asking for commitment to phase out rent controls over two or three years. The council, an organization of landlords, which has been campaigning against the con-trols since they were in-troduced, said abolition is one of the things needed to spark a massive housing boom in the province.

The letter also calls for a reduction in mortgage inter-est rates, the issuing of tax-free bonds for rental housing, and the forcing of municiplities to rezone decaying areas for higher density.

It says tenants who need as sistance to meet uncontrolled rents should be given annual grants at least equal to the homeowners grant.

The council says it estimates 100,000 new housing units, of all types, will be needed in the Lower Mainland by 1980. It estimates the units would cost $6.1 billion over the next five years and says the government cannot afford to pro-vide the units on its own and should encourage the private sector to help generate housing expansion. In another release, issued

Council chairman Robert Gibson said the increase means apartment heating costs will increase 20 per cent, and are not covered in the 10.6 per cent ceiling on rent increases legislated by the government.

Pen Site Chosen

VANCOUVER (CP) - A site near Aggasiz, about 70 miles east of here, has been chosen for a new federal maximun security prison to accommodate 192 prisoners, a Canadin Penitentiary Servive official said Friday.

Doug McGregor, Pacific Region acting director, said site preparation is expected to start this fall on a 180-acre. site near Agassiz. Mountain Penitentiary officials are awaiting federal treasury board approval of the project, one of five new federl pris-ons slated for British Columbia between now and 1980, he said.

Sociology professor Hari Sharma, a spokesman for one of three groups involved, issued a statement calling for the release of more than 30,000 "political prisoners" in India, including persons arrested since Mrs. Gandhi's government proclaimed a state of emergency in late June.

The statement accused Mrs. Gandhi of turning facts upside-down and imposing a dictatorship after a court found her guilty of corrupt electoral practices.

"The greed of Mrs. Gandhi for autocratic rule has been consistent and insatiable." the state said. Year's Sentence For Swindler VANCOUVER (CP) - Benson Hunter, a former securities salesman, was sentenced Friday to one year in prison for stealing $301,000 from four of his clients.

The judge said it was with "considerable reluctance" that he concluded Hunter must be sentenced to some term of imprisonment.

"In the special circumstances of this case, I am not of the opinion that the term of imprisonment should be a lengthy one," he said.

He said that Hunter had and good reputation and there was no reason to suppose that he was other than a respected member of the community in which he lived.

If Al Scott had any doubts about the Korean men's vol-leyball team prior to Friday, he doesn't have them now. The coach of the B.C. I boys, squad watched helplessly as

There were 12 students, most of them teachers, and each did a scene or short play in two weekends at Langham Court Theatre. Here opportu-nity was provided for those of the 39 students in the high school workshop who did not get speaking parts in Dream, to be cast in the excerpts.

The theatre depart though small in comparison to many others at UVic, has been making some waves la-

The Canadian Radio Television Commission announces that it is prepared to receive applications for cable television broadcasting liceness to serve the Brooks, Wetaskiwin and Camrose, Alberta areas, and Grand Forks, Agassiz, Harrison, Hot Springs, Rosedale, Hope, Midway, Sunset Beach, Llons Bay and Brunswick, British Columbia areas.

Parties wishing to serve any or all of these areas and requested to file applications on or before October 31, 1975. All applicants planning the use of microwave must submit details of routes and costs. In particular applicants should submit the following:

a) Where microwave is to be provided by a common carrier, a copy of an agreement in principle between the common carrier and the applicant should be submitted. Details of any proposals by common carriers for the use of microwave, the cost of the service and charges levied by the common carrier should also be included. In the event that the application pertains to an existing or proposed microwave network all details relating to cost sharing arrangements with other applicants or licensees which are, or proposing to, participate in the network must be provided.

The Commission will not consider any cable television applications which are predicated on the video-taping of television signals unless all of the necessary authorizations have been received in writing and filed with the Commission.

Persons wishing to apply are reminded of the eligibility requirements laid down by the Governor General in Council in Directions to the Commission, Orders in Council, P.C. 1969-2229 as amended and P.C. 1972-1569. The Commission expects to consider any application meeting these eligibility requirements.

Potential applicants are also reminded that in the Commission's past decisions and policy announcements the Commission has required that licensees have effective ownership and control of local headends, amplifiers and drops in their cable television undertakings.

The Commission firmly believes that cable television must complement existing broadcasting services in Alberta and British Columbia and should not jeopardize their present or future capability. Hence, cable television applications must outline specific measures for introducing cable television into areas in a manner that will assist and strengthen these services and help to achieve the broadcasting objectives set out in the Broadcasting Act.

As well, upon hearing applications for the locations in question, the Commission will request:

a) the licensees of the local television broadcasting stations whose A such representations as they consider necessary concerning the probably effect of the licensing of cable television undertakings within these service contours on the continued viability of such

 b) the licensees of local television stations and each cable applicants to explain the actions taken or proposed to be taken individually and co-operatively to ensure the continuing availability and quality of "off air" television service.

The Commission will announce at a later date the time and place of the Public Hearing where these applications will be considered and where they may be examined by the public. The particulars of each application will also be published in the newspapers of the area

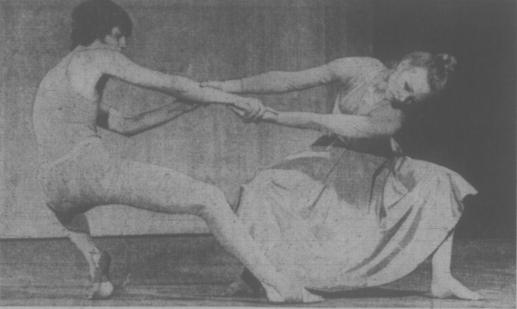

The public will then have the opportunity to submit comments on any application by filing a written intervention with the undersigned and by giving a copy to the applicant at least fifteen (15) days before the a return to the format which made Claptor a 60s legend with the Yardbirds, John Mayall's Bluesbreakers and Cream. Recorded live around the world over the past year, with the same group he used on his two post-comeback solo albums, Clapton's discipline and dedication to the blues are once more the source of his appeal. E. C. Was Here is a return to the strict blues form, closer to Bluesbreakers than the pyrotechnics of Cream and the Yardbirds, or than the more relaxed, rock-ing Derek and the Dominoes. Consequently, it may be the classic Clapton album.

Only one addition to the Clapton repertoire is featured here, but it is a thoroughly engaging, spirited and hard-driving version of the Bobby driving version of the Bobby Bland classic, "Farther Up the Road." For the rest he focuses on classic blues "Drifting Blues," "Rambling On My Mind" — and his own compositios in the blues framework, including "Can't Find My Way Home" and "Presence of the Lord."

"Rambling," the obligatory Robert Johnson number, is perhaps closest to a Cream-

perhaps closest to a Cream-style ekercise, running on for about 10 minutes. But it is closer, in its disciplined ap-proach and agonized vocal, to proach and agonized vocal, to the version that Clapton re-corded in 1966 with Blues-breakers. The contrast be-tween the two clearly delin-eates his growth, as guitarist and singer. "Presence of the Lord," sung as a duet be-tween Eric and Yvonne Elli-man, features an up-tempo break that recalls Derek and the Dominoes' capacity for the Dominoes' capacity for uniting pure blues and pure rock. It's Better to Be a Dead Hero ... At Least for Peking Honor

Special to The Times

PEKING - Dauntlessly battling landslides, fires, flooding rivers, collapsing walls and runaway horses. It's Lozang Tanzin, the latest in along line of modern Chi-

Unfortunately, like many present-day Chinese heroes, Tanzin is dead.

Last December 30 — the eighteenth officially recorded time he risked his life to save private lives or public proper-ty — Lozang Tanzin dove be-neath the ice on a frozen Tibetan river, rescued the little son of a former serf, and then was swept away by the river Lozang Tanzin follows in the tradition of such Commu-nist heroes as Lei Feng, "the nist neroes as Lei Feng, "the ruthless screw of communism" and Iron Man-Wang, the legendary and tireless driller in the Taching oil field. All of them have been portrayed as selflessly working for the building of Communism to the point of physical collapse or risking their lives to save their fellow countrymen.

Although Tanzin personally didn't have the chance, some heroes are remembered for their death-bed exhortations struggle.

Living heroes sometimes are a different story. A once revered night soil collector, for instance, vanished into obscurity after she was attacked for acquiring bourgeois habits and becoming conceited. And Nieh Yuan-tzu, a celebrated pioneer drafter of big-character posters at Peking University during the later 1960s, hasn't been heard of since the Cultural Revolution.

since the Cultural Revolution.

The emergence of a new, officially annointed hero like Lozang Tanzin offers clues about the directions of official thinking in the People's Republic. It is significant, for instance, that Lozang Tanzin was not Han Chinese, who make un the year majority of make up the vast majority of the population, but a member

China's national minorities but also often reflects a concern about "reactionary" eth-nic elements who still resent the growing presence of Han Chinese in minority areas.

So Lozang Tanzin is quoted as often admonishing his fel-low Tibetans: "These Han comrades are sons of workers or poor and lower-middle pea-sants. As our class brothers, they have come from all over the country to these highlands to build up and defend the frontier areas. We should give them more consideration and

It is a fair bet that this quo-tation will be given its widest circulation in Tibet. Even before the public emergence of Lozang Tanzin as a hero, the Chinese press appeared to be devoting a lot of space to the glorification of Han Chinese workers and professionals who are working in Tibet who are working in Tibet, building the economy or upgrading social services.

Like most articles touching on Tibet, the voluminous amount of material on Lozang

Tanzin in the Chinese press in recent days contrasts up-beat accounts of the present day with what it was supposed to be like in the old days. The story of Tanzin's life begins when he was a slave boy in a Tibetan lamasery before the People's Liberation Army moved in and took control of Tibet away from local ele-ments in 1959.

Actually, it is a rare day that the Chinese newspaper reader isn't treated to at least one account of the worst hor-rers of the China that existed before the success of the Chinese revolution. Realizing that Chinese as old as 30 can not recall what it was like before the establishment of the People's Republic in 1949, the older Chinese revolutionaries are openly con-cerned with reminding people of how bad things were. Like many Chinese heroes, Tanzin was a member of the Communist Party and a soldier in the People's Liberation Army. By strong implication, he is portrayed as a man of unswerving loyalty who never questioned military orders or political directives. This is in-marked contrast to the heroes authority or going against the

New Camera Lens Boon to Dentists

VANCOUVER (CP) - Two Vancouver men have developed a camera lens adapter which they say may revolutionize dental photography.

The device, which they call an oral zoom converter, is much easier and convenient to use than the expensive and awkward devices now used to photograph steeth, said Dr. Christo Obreschkow, a dentist who helped invent the converter with Robert Watler, head of Western Precision Products Ltd.

The converter, a small tube

The converter allows close-ups to be taken of objects from three-quarters of an inch in size to one foot.

begun to sell the converters after completing an initial production run. He said he ex-pects patents to be granted on the device in a few weeks. Vancouver-based firm will be manufacturing 1000 converters a month, he said.

Cancer Cure, Energy Uses Seen in 'Monopole' Discovery

We were so busy admiring the delightful gold and silver jewellery from the Carribean last time we visited Y. De Lima's that we didn't get around to noting the really unique and rarely beautiful carved Chinese lacquer pieces which caught our eye this time... These are all hand-carved copies of pieces now reposing in the French National. Museum in Paris... Carving lacquer which is laid on in dozens of layers... is an ancient Chinese art dating as far back as the Han Dynasty'... These pieces at De Lima's are hand-carved in Talwan... and if we told you their prices, you wouldn't believe us... because we ourself can scarcely believe anything so beautiful can be so inexpensive!... There's a round lily-bordered plate, depicting a traditional Chinese scene... A pair of lacquer vases decorated with chrysanthemums, lilles and roses... A big round plate decorated with eight traditional emblems... replica of a Ch'ing Dynasty plate... A rectangular dish with rose border and a pair of dragons gamboling around a pearl... faithful copy of its Ming Dynasty original... Christie's will even teach you how to do it! . .

There's simply no let-up in the popular enthusiasm for needlepoint and petitpoint, Mrs. Low told us when we dropped in to see her at Christie's this week. It's a hobby you can carry around with you... It's one of the most relaxing of occupations (that's why so many harried businessmen are taking it up!)... And when you finish whatever you're working on, you've really got something to be proud of ... something you can pass on to your children and their children!... Mind you, we discovered that canvasses and materials have been hit by inflation just like everything else in sight... but curiously enough, a lady came into the shop while we were there and remarked that Christie's prices were lower than those in some other stores where she'd priced the shop while we were there and remarked that Christie's prices were lower than those in some other stores where she'd priced needlecraft materials ... whereupon Mrs. Low informed us privately that she's able to keep prices lower (excuse the pun!) because she's satisfied whith a lower markup ... which makes it nice for all you needlepoint addicts who can buy simply everything you need for your hobby at Christie's! ... We noticed a lovely French canvas called "The Four Seasons" which has, it seems, been out of print for a long time ... and is now back at Christie's ... And if you look in the window, you'll see a gorgeous handmade quilt in a leaf design, which is for sale ... Christie's, 818 Fort St., 384-8770.

Then there's the juggler. She's the woman who fills the dual role of housewife and woman working full or part time outside the home. About three fifths of all women workers in the United States fit in this double role; untold millions more the United States fit in this double role; untold millions more do so in other countries.

Whether the woman with an outside job is happier than the "just a housewife" is something probably as individual as fingerprints. How many of us with jobs have not on occasions, especially Monday, wished that the office didn't have to beckon? How many times in a crisis we have longed for an extra pair of hands, an extra pound of strength!

Or how many times have we signed that it we wore interest.

Or, how many times have we sighed that if we were just rich enough, we could have our cake and eat it too - the rewarding career and the wherewithal to hire someone else to do the dirty work?

But any wife who works, whether of necessity or desire, should listen to how some of her "just a housewife" sisters feel about their roles.

attitude of dissatisfaction dominates, says one woman who has researched the matter.

Dr. Ann Oakley, a research officer at Bedford College, the University of London, has studied attitudes toward housework in a scries of interviews with 40 Lendon homemakers. "Although the sample . . . is a British one," she says, "the housewife's situation is not fundamentaly different in other modern industrialized societies.".

Oakley, who writes extensively on women's roles, has published her housewife study in "The Sociology of Housework" (Pantheon Books, New York):

"The major finding," she concludes, is that "dissatisfaction with housework predominates.'

This parallels, Oakley concluded, the finding from industrial sociology that "the opportunity (for) social relationships with other workers is one of the most prized specific of any interactions."

Autonomy was the most highly valued dimension of the housewife role. "Being one's own boss," a phase used by nearly half the women, "and exercising control over-pace of work is a facet . . . which contrasts favorably with employHousework was the most disliked aspect of housewifery. Oakley noted that any way you add it up, the housewife has a long working week; the average in her sample was 77 hours, with a range of 48 (the housewife with a full-time job)

And to all those women with outside jobs who wish to be "just a housewife:" Better reconsider. Oakley found that all the women who had held high status jobs in the past (computer programmer, fashion model) were dissatisfied

HOW THE "ROCK OF GIBRALTAR" WORKS FOR B.C.

When the Gibraltar Mine came to the Cariboo in 1971, it marked an important step forward for Williams Lake. The town had long been the centre of ranching and sawmilling activity...and mining added substantially to its economic base. Many of the mine's 500 employees and their families became residents of Williams Lake...new homes were built ... and with more custómers for many goods and services, new business opportunities arose. The company's operations also created a new demand for the products of several local industries. But the benefits of a mine like Gibraltar extend far beyond the immediate community. With its annual production of about 100 million pounds of copper in concentrate, this single mine each year returns millions of dollars in tax revenue to British Columbia. And Gibraltar is no isolated example. Throughout B.C., mining is a major economic factor...in some cases the dominant factor in a town's existence. Combine the dozens of minesites around our province, the approximately 15,000 people directly employed by mining and the nearly one billion dollars that mining annually returns to our province...and you've got B.C.'s second largest industry. The "rock of Gibraltar" and the products of our other great mines are working for B.C. in ways that benefit everyone.

The loan guarantee is-aimed at helping Panarctic's maintain the level of exploration it has carried out in the Arctic Islands during the last few years, Buchanan said.

Earlier this year, company president Charles Hetherington said it was doubtful that the company would get enough funds to finance its $59-million exploration program in 1975.

Television sounded the first warning that fans were capa-ble of being lured away from their Saturday afternoon spartan rite.

But club owners ignored the omen. In classic British indus-trial style they stuck by aging ize and improve the appeal of their product.

The question is raised by Theodore Cooper, U.S. assistant secretary for health, edu-

"Ultimately a stand will have to be taken to support or deny the use of vaccines against the sexually transmitted diseases," Cooper says.

There are at least 14 sexually transmitted diseases known as STD — with epidemics of some in various parts of the world.

Safe, effective vaccines against syphilis and gonorrhea are still mainly a re-search htpe, Cooper says, but they will raise social implications, and the federal govern-ment may "ultimately have responsibility for establishing the policy" governing their

While the link is not yet proven, the possibility is making U.S. researchers cautious in developing a vaccine against HSV, says Dr. Andre Nahmias of Emory University School of Medicine in Atlanta.

Genetic material or DNA in a vaccine made of killed or attenuated HSV viruses might somehow activate later cancers. So the attempt now is to use just part of the pro-tein coat of a virus, that would stimulate antibodies, without any virus DNA in it.

China, Neighbors Hold Talks

PEKING — China's future relations with fellow Marxist regimes in Vietnam and Cam-bodia have become the subject of intensive diplomatic activity here this week.

Khieu Samphan, the leader of Cambodia's Khieu Samphan, the dominant figure in that country's government, will arrive in Peking today for talks with Chinese leaders which could determine the future role of Prince Norodom Sihanouk. The prince, strongly supported by the Chinese, is nomin-ally the head of state of the new revolu-tionary government but there has been growing uncertainty over when, sometimes even whether, he will return to Cambodia. For the past few days, Chinese leaders have been conferring here with a delegation of economic officials from North Vietnam.

of economic officials from North Vietnam. Statements released by both sides have been veiled but they strongly indicate the two sides are discussing future Chinese aid to North Vietnam and South Vietnam.

Although "relations between Peking and Hanoi seem cordial, it is no secret that China is gravely concerned about the close ties North Vietnam has with the Soviet Union, its chief supplier of aid. In its indirect way, the official Chinese press has been warning North Vietnam against maintaining too clise a relationship with the Soviet too clise a relationship with the Sovie Union.

The press regularly publishes articles de-crying the way the Soviet Union uses its aid programs as levers for gaining influence over such countries as Egypt. China may have enough surplus rice and oil to offer the Vietnamese an attractive package. By offering aid to Vietnam, China would in effect be offering to act as a modest counter-balance to the Soviet Union and its massive aid pro-

Although the role of the Soviet Union in Authough the role of the soviet Union in Southeast Asia as, a whole will almost certainly arise, one of the main concerns of the Chinese must inevitably be the role of Norodom Sihanouk, the man they have supported

For many weeks, the foreign community in Peking has been awash in reports that Prince Sihanouk fears returning to Cambodia. His associates have said the revolubodia. The prince has long been candid about the differences between himself — a self-admittedly—bourgeois Buddhist — and the Marxist jungle fighters who captured Phnom Penh this spring. Khieu Samphan and Ieng Sary, the deputy leader of the Cambodian delegation arriving today, were political opponents before Prince Sihanouk lost power in a coup in 1970. The prince nevertheless became the leader in exile of the Royal Government of National Union, the nominal leader ment of National Union, the nominal leader

In their falks with Hkieu Samphan and his delegation, the Chinese will be looking for a better general understanding of Cambodian policies, still something of a mystery because of the isolation of Cambodia from the rest of the world in recent-months. There will also be the question of how Prince Sihanouk fits Yesterday, Prince Sihanouk was believed to be still in North Korea, where he has been for several weeks, A telephone call to his residence there found an aide who would not indicate whether the prince will return to his home in Peking to talk with Samphan. It may turn out that the prince will bide his time — either in Pyongyang or in Tientsin, close to Peking — waiting for his Chinese friends to inform him of what Samphan says about his return to Cambodia.

Colorful Brontman Saga: Bootleggers and Beauties

Sam Bronfman — "Mr. Sam" to everyone in the North American liquor busi-ness — worried about his grandchildren and what they would do with his money. "You've heard about shirt-You've heard about shirt-sleeves to shirtsleeves in three generations?" he once-said. "I'm worried about the third generation. Empires have come and gone."

The Bronfman story began just 86 years ago when Ye-chiel Bronfman, a wealthy merchant from what was then Bessarabia in what is now the Soviet Union, landed in Montreal with his wife, three sons and his own rabbi, brought along to insure that the children remained true to their father's faith. The Bronfman saga from then to now is a olorful tale filled with large fortunes, bootleggers, charming men and beautiful women. and now a tragedy — kidnap-ping — which the family has feared since the Leopold-Loeb case in Chicago 41 years ago.

'Shirtsleeves'

Mr. Sam, Yechiel Bronfman's third son and the man most responsible for the family's wealth and success, may have worried about "shirtsleeves to shirtsleeves in three generations," but only a major economic collapse - or the nation suddenly going teetotal - could threaten the Bronfman fortune now. It seems as solid as the Mies van der Rohe-designed Seagram Building on Park Avenue in New York, the monu-mental skyscraper of glass and bronze which houses the main offices of the Bronfm family enterprise, Distillers Corp.-Seagrams Ltd.

The family began as hote-lieres in small Canadian cities, entering the liquor business as wholesalers in the 1920s. In 1924 they built their first distillery and before long were able to take advantage of a great boon to the Canadian whiskey business — prohibition in the United States.

Prohbition 'Paid'

Mr. Sam, who died in 1971 that prohibition made him rich though he always denied legging. His distillery set up an auxiliary firm on the French-owned island of St. Pierre, off Newfoundland, a ruse to avoid a Canadian law whiskey to the United States.

The auxiliary handled hundreds of thousands of cases of liquor during prohibi .The Bronfmans knew where this booze was going but claimed they had nothing to do with its ultimate sale to customers in the legally dry United States,

In 1936, Henry Morgenthau reasury, told Canadian distillers they would have to pay $60 million in delinquent excise taxes on liquor imported illegally during prohibition. Without admitting any illegal activities, Seagrams eventual-ly agreed to pay $1.5 million compromise settlement.

When prohibition ended, Sam Bronfman and his sam Broniman and his brothers had an invaluable asset — a huge store of ma-ture whiskey. He exported it into the United States and blended it under several brand names, all of them superior to the harsh new liquor being made in newly reopened U.S. distilleries. Bronfman established a dominant position in the American market which he has held ever since, challenged only briefly for first place by Schenley before and offer World Was II.

Milton Kronheim, 86, the eider statesman of the Washington, D.C., area liquor industry, recalled Wednesday that "I probably bought one of the first carloads of whiskey they (The Bronfmans) sold in this country — legally, that is." Kronheim remembered that in the early days bered that in the early days Seagrams sold Five Crown and Seven Crown whiskey. The Five Crown disappeared during World War II, and Seven Crown has been the most successful brand in America ever since "The key to their great success was their constancy in staying with their formulas and their brands," Kronheim sald. Sam Bronfman always cared about quality.

Brothers Out

Mr. Sam also had an appreclass in American life. He liked to give his brands shob appeal. He personally de-signed the Seven Crown symbol — a crown on a velvet pillow — and encouraged ad-vertisements for Seagram's which showed rich and glamorous people drinking it.

Sam Bronfman was the acknowledged genius among the four Bronfman brothers. The youngest, Allan, was the only one to graduate from college, but that gave him no real advantage. Describing the original Seagram company, which was run down by bad family management, Mr.Sam once said: "Members of a family don't want to work as hard as employees — and you can't fire them." But over a generation he did force his three brothers to the sidelines, eventually taking com-

Always Hustling

According to colleagues and contemporaries, the short, rotund Mr. Sam was a delightful character, quick of wit, and a brilliant businessman. "He was fabulous, really dynamic," one in-law of the family observed Wednesday in an interview. "He was all business until the day he died, your original entrepreneur, always hustling, thinking of new ideas, solving problems. He never rested."

For years, according to col-leagues, he tried to live down his image as a bootlegger les' man and high-liver. He from Canada. Edgar, father of the kidnapped Samuel II, now is the key man in the corporation, though it is reportedly run on a day-to-day basis by a business executive from outside the family, Jack Yogfman. In recent years the company has had some setbacks. Major attempts to break into the Scotch and bourbon markets have been less than successful, and Seagram's has largely missed out on the booming vodka market.

Provinces Plot Strategy

By LINDA HUGHES

First round in the battle over medicare financing in Canada takes place Monday in the B.C. legislative chambers. Provincial health ministers are meeting in Victoria for a two-day closed-door session to decide on strategy in the face of federal plans to cut back on the amount Ottawa contrib-utes to health care costs. B.C. officials have been closed-mouth about the possible impact the cutback will have on the provincial budget but it's clear the picture does not look promising for the Ottawa now pays about 50 per cent of the cost of medical services but the June 23 federal-budget proposed to start cutting that share ne t year by reducing the percentage of increasing costs the federal government will contribute to.

B.C. has worked out rough estimates of how much the plan will cost the province over the next few years but the amount is being kept se-cret and will be discussed at the conference. Ottawa has not said how much it will save by the plan.

Officer Charged In Death

VANCOUVER (CP) - Constable Richard Musgrave, 28, a five-year veteran of the city police force, has been charged with murder punishable by life in prison, Chief Constable Don Winterton of Vancouver said Friday.
